

Connolly Barracks Reimagined Museum

The museum at Connolly Barracks will be a modern, accessible, and interactive cultural facility located on the ground floor of the redeveloped Officers' Mess building.

Key features include:

- Exhibition galleries showcasing Longford's social, military, and cultural history, as well as the story of the barracks itself.
- A music heritage section highlighting local traditions, musicians, and the digitisation of significant collections
- Interactive and multimedia displays to engage visitors and make the experience accessible and enjoyable.
- A museum shop supporting local artists, craftspeople, and food producers.
- Universal accessibility with step-free entry, accessible WCs, braille signage, and autism-friendly design elements.

Purpose

The purpose of the museum is to:

- Preserve and celebrate Longford's heritage: By collecting and displaying artefacts, stories, and music, the museum will safeguard the county's unique history for future generations.
- Foster community pride and integration: The museum is designed as a welcoming space for all, encouraging participation from Longford's diverse communities
- Support education and lifelong learning: Through school programmes, workshops, guided tours, and interactive exhibits, the museum will offer educational opportunities for children, young people, and adults.
- Promote cultural tourism: As a flagship visitor attraction, the museum will increase footfall to Longford town, encourage longer stays, and support the local economy.
- Enable creativity and collaboration: The museum will host events, talks, performances, and collaborative projects with local artists, musicians, historians, and educational partners.
- Ensure accessibility and inclusion: The design and programming will ensure that everyone, regardless of age, ability, or background can access and enjoy the museum.
