

Berlin Artist to show in Backstage Atrium

Wednesday 13th March at 7pm

Elena Duff, originally from Cavan, lives and works as an artist in Berlin. Her exhibition in the Backstage Atrium Gallery on Wednesday 13th March (at 7 pm) hosts a series of intriguing small 3D pieces, paper sculptures and paintings. Working on the theme of fairytales for adults her work depicts that which is intangible - thoughts, dreams, hopes and emotions , work that ranges from the slightly surreal to those grounded in reality.

Sharing the space is wildlife artist James Brady from Clones Monaghan. James is a gifted wildlife painter, graphic artist and designer, with recent forays into conceptual art and book illustration. Educated in Northern Ireland he moved to the countryside in the late 90's and found an affinity with the landscape. He is currently concentrating on expanding a body of work on local wildlife and equestrian themes.

Both artists recently contributed to Windows 20 anthology.

Admission is free with poets Heather Brett, Honor Duff and Valerie Masters opening the exhibition. Everyone welcome. In association with the Arts office, Longford.
